Yosemite's Rival.

Is the vast Sierrs wilderness far to the southward of the femons Ye emite Valley there is a yet grander valley of the seme kind. It is situated on the south fork ; King's river, above the most extensive groves and frests of the giant orqueia, and beneath the shadows of the bighest mountein in the range, where the canons are dispost and the snew-laden peaks are crowd ed miret closely together. It is called the Big Kirg's river Canon, or King's river Yosemire.

I is about ten miles long, half a mile wide, and the stupe ideas racks of puro ish gray granice that form the walls are from 2,500 to 5 000 feet in height, while the depth of the valley below the general surface of the mountain mree from which it has been oarved is considerably more than a mile.

In this valley are grand on cades, natural deer parks, meadows, pastures and gardene. One of the grandess of the mountains is Gracier Monument. The largest meadow in the valley lies at the foot of the Grand Sentinel. It is noted for its fine growth of sweet brier rose.

Snow falls every winter about the valley to a depth of ten to twenty feet, and the booming of avalanches is a common sourd. Neverthelese the traitest flowers, blue and gold and purple, bloom on the brows of the great canon rocks, and on the frosty parks, up to a height of 13 000 fest, as well as in sheltered hollows and on level mesdows and lake borders and tanks of streams.

The descent of the King's aver streams is mostly made in the form of czscades, which are outspread in flat plume-like sheets on smooth slopes, or are squeezed in narrow-throated gorges, boiling, seething, in deep swirling pools, pouring from fin to lin, and breaking into ragged to sing masses of spray and foam in boulder chaked canons,—meking marrelons mixtures with the downing mervelous mixtures with the down-pouring sunbeams, deplaying a thousand forms and colors, and giving forth a great variety of wild mountain melody.

All of this wonderful King's river region, together with the Kaweah and Tule sa-quoise, should be comprehended in one grand national park. This region contains no mines of consequence, it is too high and too rocky for agriculture, and even the lumber industry need suffer no unreasonable restriction. Let our law-givers then make haste before it is too late to set apart this surpassingly glorious region for the reces-tion and well-being or humanity, and all the word will rise up and call them blessed. - John Muir, in the Century.

China Won this Fight.

In the rear car of a Taird avenue elevated train a little after 1 o'clock Sanday morning five Chinamen were sitting sleepily in a row, without speaking a word to one snother. The car was crowded with a lot of half-drunken young men. The sight of the five Chinamen sitting so quetly together struck them as being extremely indicreus, and they began to guy them. "Wake up," one young man yelled, and everybody but the Chinamen laughed. "Ain't they butsa? Day'd beat a straight flush," remarked a red-haired young tough, and his companions were convulsed with

This was kept up notil the train drew near the Eighty-night street station, and to all appearances the Chicamen paid no at tention to the taunts. Then, as the station was reached, the passengers who wanted to get out stood in a line near the door. The red-haired young man happened so stand opposite the Chinaman who sat in the middle of the five. The almond eyes were closed, and to all appearances the man was asleep. The red-haired fellow suddenly shot out his fist until it was within an inch of the Chicaman's near, and called out: "Wake up, yaller."

Like a flash the Chinaman's eyes opened, and his foot shot out and kicked his termenter on the shin. The young man shouted and kicked back. The next instant the five Chinamen were on their feet, striking right and and left at the men who had taunted them. Then followed a queer scene. The wild young men who had been amusing The wild young men who had been amusing themselves at the Chinamen's expense were so taken by surprise that without making any resistance they rushed for the door. They couldn't get out, and while they huddled together, waiting for the train to stop the Chinamen ponneed upon them. One Chinaman kicked right and left, and every time his footstruck a shin there was a yell. Another grabbed every white ear within reach and clawed every neck he could get his nails on. The others pounded away like windmills, with plenty of effort, but with little effect.

Some of the o'der passengers stepped in at this point and pushed the Chinamen is to their seats Then, as the young men hastened pell mell out of the car, the Chinamen began to jabber away at one another at a terrible rate over their glorious victory.—N. Y. Sun.
